

Money For Nothing (And Your Chains For Free)

$Rev: 294 $

This is a Reform UK Scotland Position Paper

There is a lot of chatter just now that the way to alleviate the financial hardship caused by our governments' actions over the past few years is a handout called Universal Basic Income (UBI).

UBI is a cash sum automatically and regularly given to every citizen, without qualification. It is sometimes promoted as a way of simplifying the benefits system and thereby saving public money.

The effect of UBI is likely to be the confirmation for many people that an existence on state benefits is viable and permissible. As time goes on more and more people will abandon productive work for dependency; the amount of wealth created in the economy will decrease; people who want to strive will find their ambition devalued; our economy will collapse into decadence.

UBI is what masters pay slaves and this one will be paid in CBDC. Once a large enough proportion of the population are dependent on UBI the chains will be tightened and the slaves will have to dance to their masters' tune.

State benefits are necessary but must be considered as temporary relief for as long as a need exists, not as a crutch to support indolence or servitude.

Free people earn their own money. Reform UK Scotland rejects Universal Basic Income unreservedly.
