

Real Independence

This is a Reform UK Scotland Position Paper

The SNP are determined to wrench Scotland out of the United Kingdom and join the European Union, in the name of "Independence" which, of course, would be political, economic and cultural vandalism. Fortunately, this will never happen.

If it ever did, it would put Scots increasingly under the thumb of unelected EU bureaucrats, with our personal freedoms continually being whittled away by their every mad whim and the country's natural resources plundered by foreign corporations.

Real independence is independence from government, doing what we want in the way we want to do it. Reform UK's plans for further devolution of powers will ensure that we regain control over our own lives and our environment. We want to drag more power away from Westminster and Holyrood and put it where it is most effectively used, not centralised into the hands of career politicians. This may mean empowering local authorities, community councils, schools, voluntary groups or even individual people.

We want a society where people are allowed to live their lives as they see fit without oppressive official oversight; a society of responsible adults; a society of independent-minded people. Such people are hard to rule but easy to govern as they will contribute to their society rather than just taking from it.

Real independence does not mean just swapping one overbearing regime for another. If you agree, please join us at <https://reformparty.uk>.
